In most cases, a complaint should initially be filed with the supplier who provided you with the item. CAB has a number of rules on its website to complain about poor service or faulty goods. These include complaining by phone, complaining in writing and including letters in the template. CAB advice on filing a complaint. If you are not satisfied with the supplier's response, then you can choose to complain: the ombudsman scheme regulator is an independent mediators trade association (if the supplier is a member)Safety incidents related to medical devices can be reported to the Gov UK website www.mhra.gov.uk or their Advers incident centre helpline 020 3080 7080 to the Medicines and Healthcare Products Regulatory Authority (MHRA). The MHRA is the government agency responsible for ensuring that medical devices and medicines work and are safe in an agreed way. The definition of 'medical devices' includes devices used to help patients and users, so many everyday life aids, such as bathroom elevators, nightdines and canes, are medical devices. Any incident involving the safety of a medical device (including safety issues with instructions for use) should be reported to the MHRA, especially if the incident caused injury, a life-threatening illness or death. Buying from a private person gives you less rights. You can only file a claim against the vendor if it does not match the product description or is not the owner of the vendor. As a result, some firms sometimes act as private sellers to avoid legal responsibilities to their customers. If you suspect this is happen, call the Citizens Advice consumer helpline by calling or 0345 404 0506 about your rights and what action to take on the Citizens Advice Bureau (CAB) website. The length of the manufacturer's warranty does not limit any claim you may make to the seller if a product develops an error outside the warranty period, if you can show that the error was unreasonable at that time in product life, you can still make a claim against the seller. You may be asked if you would like to buy an extended warranty. Under the Goods Sale Act, you may not consider whether you have chosen to purchase its warranties and note that you have legal rights. Manufacturers separate from the automatic rights you have against the seller and may be more limited. For more information, read the Citizens Advice Bureau guidelines for warranties and warranties. Check what kind of maintenance contract the supplier offers for large complex items such as stair removal. Some suppliers are members of a trade association. Many of these trade associations have an enforcement code that manages the customer service of their members and can therefore help you reflect from unscrupulous sales practices. For example, some commercial associations prohibit their members from communicating with people without being invited to sell their products. They may also prohibit their members from using high-pressure sales tactics, such as offering a discount if you order that day or calling their manager while showing you the equipment about a 'special discount/deal'. Therefore, if you have a supplier option for the product you want to buy, we recommend that you consider trade association member suppliers. We register suppliers as members of various commercial associations (see list of these trade associations) and our ratings give more weight to commercial associations with codes of practice approved by the Office for Fair Trading (OFT) (e.g. the British Health Trade Association) or managed by an audit plan that meets the requirements of the UK Accreditation Service (UKAS). We also record whether suppliers meet ISO 9000 standards. These standards define a Quality System that confirms that formalized business processes are implemented, and therefore may be another indicator to look for if you have a supplier option. If you are 'chronically ill or disabled' and are buying items/s for their personal or home use, you may be able to buy equipment designed for use by disabled people without paying VAT. In terms of VAT, if a person is 'chronically ill or disabled' they have a physical or mental disorder that has a long-term and significant negative impact on their ability to carry out daily activities. There is a condition that the medical profession considers a chronic disease (e.g. diabetes). If you ill,So, you will not qualify only if you are temporarily disabled or incapacitated (e.g. if you have a broken leg). Examples of products likely to qualify for VAT reduction (if for personal or domestic use of a chronically ill or disabled person) include: wheelchairsairliftscomputer software or hardware specifically designed for individuals with disabilities. Staple turners, button hooks and similar gadgets or devices are important in the price of devices designed to facilitate everyday tasks for individuals with disabilities who have just been adapted for use by a wheelchair or sedige user price but, we list multiple suppliers, only the cheapest price is important to look for more. When prices were last updated (this (this under every price). Consider whether mail/delivery is included (if you are shopping by mail order or online)Is the supplier a member of a trade association? (see below) Did one supplier list the price without VAT and the other without VAT? Check suppliers' return policies and warranty/warranties (see below). Check what's included in the price and what the ongoing costs will be for complex equipment that requires maintenance and/or service. Experienced therapists or trusted evaluators know a lot about products and will help you make sure the product is right for you and will continue to be suitable in the future. You can get an assessment and advice from social services. GOV.UK webSitesYuratively you can choose to pay for a special occupational therapist. If you would like to request a private appointment with an occupational therapist, you can get the information of local private occupational therapists on the 'College of Occupational Therapists Specialist Section - Independent Practice' (COTSS-IP) website. www.cotss-ip.org.uk or telephone their inquiry line: 0845 129 7699.You can check if a therapist is registered to learn about the products and try them at an independent living centre (ILC) in www.hcpc-uk.org/audiences/ with the State Health Professional Association (HCPC). There are about 30 ILCs in the UK. Most products we do not sell but you will be able to tell where to buy. We recommend that you make an appointment as you can view the equipment in an exhibition before visiting. It's a good opportunity to see what's available and meet competing suppliers. The main exhibition of equipment is NAIDEX, held every year at birmingham's National Exhibition Centre and is in Glasgow. www.naidex.co.uk support us by donating close
